I don't go to many movies, but "Jaws" is the exception which drew me through about two and one-half viewings, urged on by Martin the second and a half time.

And if a Waco Tribune-Herald's reviewer is correct (which is likely since we agreed prior to the Academy Awards on the merits of Godfather II) there is an unusual movie in Waco called "Bite the Bullet."

After getting acquainted with Deadline and a few armadillos and an enormous great white shark in the past few months, I find Bruce Westbrook's remarks interesting on Gene Hackman's portrayal of an animal-loving cowboy in "Bite the Bullet."

A good portrayal does not always make a good movie, but Hackman is a fine actor who can carry a movie on his talented head and shoulders. This is one about a cowboy refereeing the treatment of horses in a 700-mile endurance race through the Wild West, like that country between Llano and El Paso.

Westbrook finds the movie inspiring with a classic ending, whatever that means in "Bite..." Since I've become more appreciative of animals, even a carnivorous "eating machine," I think it should be worth the time to take a look at this Hackman performance.

The Wild West is not often remembered for its kindness to anything, men even, and mostly personal horses which were the link between cowtown civilization and oblivion.

Excellence in outburners is difficult to come by, and it seems Hollywood pulled Hackman out of drug espionage in the "French Connection" to keep horses alive in "Bite the Bullet."

Such a performance is impossible among people trying to deal with the star of "Jaws," who neither kills nor maims, but only eats.

WRECKAGE OF CRASH—A two vehicle accident at Pettibone early Friday morning wrecked this convertible and sent its driver from a local hospital to Scott & White at Temple in fair condition. A passenger in the car was injured, along with driver of the truck that collided with the auto, Johnny Barrett of Cameron.

Shooting Fatal At Rockdale

Rockdale recorded two shootings Thursday, one of which was fatal to a 29-year-old woman and the other wounding a Fort Hood soldier.

According to police reports, Janis Debose, 29, was pronounced dead on arrival at Richards Memorial Hospital in Rockdale at 11:10 p.m. Thursday. She died from a single .22 pistol wound in the heart.

A witness in the mobile home where the shooting took place said the Debose woman went into the bathroom and locked the door. Moments later the witness heard a shot. He broke into the bathroom and found Debose on the floor.

The shooting was termed suicide by officers but they are still investigating the incident. A life detector test will be given to the witness.

An accidental shooting Thursday afternoon sent a Fort Hood soldier to the Rockdale hospital suffering from a gunshot wound in the shoulder.

According to police reports Allan Hart, 19, had picked up a .38 pistol when the gun accidentally discharged, wounding him in the shoulder. He was treated and released from Richards Hospital in Rockdale.

Constable Spud Caywood and the sheriff's office investigated the incident.

Building Permits Increase

GEORGETOWN

Georgetown's construction value, usually an indicator of the city's economic health, appears headed toward its highest level since 1972. Midway through July, the city building department had issued 111 permits for construction valued at $4,116 million. That's over $1 1/2 million above the figure for all of last year, and only a little over half a million dollars short of the 1972 year-end total.

Tornado Repairs Planned

CALVERT

The Calvert School board plans to meet with a construction company this week to complete plans for the renovation of the schools damaged by the tornado that struck Calvert on April 29. Plans call for renovating the high school, high school gymnasium, the Spigner building, and portable classroom building, and rebuilding the primary building.

Creek Yields Stolen Items

ROCKDALE

Rockdale Constable Spud Caywood recovered a stolen motorcycle and a Coke box from Brushy Creek last weekend. The motorcycle belonged to a Rockdale youth and was reported stolen July 6. The constable then went to the other bank of the creek and found the Coke box, a cooler type dispenser that belonged to a local oil company. Caywood believes the motorcycle was thrown from the bridge over the creek.

Electric Bills Soaring

GATESVILLE

Electric bills for consumers in the Gatesville area are soaring like the summer heat, and there's not much relief in sight. It's all caused by "fuel adjustment," which means that when the cost of natural gas and fuel oil used in generating electricity makes any appreciable advance, the increase is passed on to the consumer. Increased use of power to run air conditioners in the summer heat has compounded the problem.

County Increasing Taxes

SOMERVILLE

"To maintain the services that the county is now providing a small tax increase is in order," said Burleson County Judge Charles Sebesta. All rural acreage will be increased equally across the board as to yield an additional eight cents per acre. "It is best to have small increases each year combatting inflation rather than falling behind and having a major tax increase," Sebesta said.

Lott Agrees To Rate Hike

ROSEBUD

The city of Lott decided in a public meeting July 17 to allow a telephone rate increase to be passed on to consumers in the Lott exchange. Continental Telephone Co. of Texas had requested a rate increase earlier in the year, and had been turned down by the council. The phone company threatened the city with a court fight. The rate increase will amount to about 22 percent over present charges.

Industry Plans Expansion

BELTON

Rockwell Industries announced Thursday the company has bought an additional 100 acres of land south of the Belton plant. The acreage use is in the planning stages, company officials said. "We want to create an area available for expansion and we believe that industry should have an adequate buffer zone between it and its non-industrial neighbors."

Collision Injures Three Men

At Pettibone

Three persons were injured at 8:30 a.m. Friday when a car and a truck collided at the Pettibone intersection about six miles west of Cameron.

According to DPS reports, a car driven by David Burd of Cleburne was entering the intersection from the farm road on to Highway 36 when it was struck by a Dr. Pepper truck driven by Johnny Barrett of Cameron.

Burd and a passenger, John Thomas Svetlik, were both under treatment at St. Edward Hospital, as was Barrett, who suffered chest injuries.

Uninsured Driver Subject To Law

AUSTIN

Uninsured motorists involved in traffic accidents resulting in death, personal injury, or property damage in excess of $250 may be subject to suspension of their driving privileges and vehicle registrations under a revision to the Texas Safety Responsibility law.

Colonel Wilson E. Speir, director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, said the new law--which was enacted during the recent Legislative session--requires DPS to evaluate traffic accidents (meeting the above criteria of seriousness) to determine if there is a "reasonable probability of judgement" against one or more of the drivers. If such a finding is made, and if the driver or owner has no liability insurance meeting the state's minimum requirement of $10,000/$20,000/$5,000, then the DPS must require the uninsured motorist believed at fault to satisfy the security provisions of the law. This may be done in one of the following ways:

*By submitting a written release signed by the other damaged parties.

*By filing an installment agreement made with the other damaged parties involved.

*By depositing security in a sufficient amount to take care of damages sustained by others and maintain proof of financial responsibility for a period of five years from the date of the accident.

*By filing copies of civil damage judgement obtained against other parties involved in the accident, or a judgement of non-liability.

When the security provisions of the law are not satisfied by the uninsured owners and operators, and the DPS determines there is "a reasonable probability of judgement" against such persons, the following provisions of the law become applicable:

*A written notice of future driver license and motor vehicle registration suspension must be forwarded to such persons by certified mail. Such a notice will advise that a hearing will be granted upon request.

*Upon receipt of a request for hearing, the DPS will notify the persons requesting same to appear before the traffic court judge in their precinct of residence, and it will become the responsibility of the traffic court judge to determine whether or not there is "a reasonable probability of judgement" and, if so, the amount of security to be deposited with DPS by the uninsured persons.

*Any suspension invoked by the DPS in motor vehicle accident cases of this type will be stayed by a request for hearing until such time as the matter is finally resolved through administrative hearing or the courts.

Speir said the new law was enacted to enable Texas to comply with a U. S. Supreme Court decision. The decision had invalidated portions of the previous Texas Safety Responsibility Law because of a lack of "due process" provisions in the old law.

Speir said the new law was signed by the Governor on June 20, and uninsured motorists involved in accidents since June 21 can be affected by its provisions.

Beginner Band Students To Meet August 4-5

Cameron beginning band students and parents are asked to attend two meetings with directors Jerry Bartley and Gary Beach.

The come-and-go sessions are set for August 4 and 5, from 6 p.m. until 9 p.m. at the high school band hall.

At the first session, directors will help students and parents decide what instrument will be most suitable for the student.

Try-outs for potential drummers will be held at the first session.

On August 5, a selection of instruments will be on display for purchase or rental. These instruments have been approved by both band directors for quality and economy.

All beginning band students and parents are urged to attend.

Alaska Seeing All The Frenzy Of Old Yukon Gold Rush

By David Edwards

FAIRBANKS

Reuter - The vast oil riches beneath Alaska's frozen Arctic tundra will soon catapult the United States' 49th state into earning billions of dollars, with all the frenzy of the old Yukon gold rush.

Work is continuing on the 800-mile Trans-Alaska Pipeline which will carry the oil from the 9.6-billion-barrel capacity Prudhoe Bay field in the north to the ice-free southern port of Valdez.

If all goes according to plan, the first oil will go on stream in late 1977 at a rate of 1.2 million barrels a day, rising later to 1.8 million barrels a day or even two million if more oil is found in the area.

The construction task is formidable, involving at its peak some 17,000 workers scattered across the nation's biggest state -- larger than Texas, California and Montana combined.

In return for working 10 or 12 hour a day, seven days a week, the pipeline workers earn as much as $1,500 a week. The money is good but the work gruelling.

Many decide to leave after only seven or eight weeks. Those who stay are often saving to buy a house or business. They include a small proportion of women. One, aged 21, employed as a truck driver, said she planned to save $15,000 to buy a part share in a grocery store.

The high wages put considerable strain on the rest of the community. Fairbanks is the main center for pipeline workers and is suffering from raging inflation.

Housing is in such short supply that a modest two-bedroom house costs $70,000, more than double the price elsewhere in the United States.

Rented accommodation is so scarce that the "unfurnished apartments" column in the local newspaper for several days carried only one advertisement -- for tents.

Crime is soaring and alcoholism has become a major problem. Many civic leaders are deeply worried about the future.

"We just hope the oil development can continue without destroying all that we treasure in Alaska," says Dr. Victor Fischer, director of the Institute of Social, Economic and Government research at the University of Alaska.

Many Alaskans fear oil is already destroying the culture of the 60,000 native Eskimos, Aleuts and Indians. The departure of natives from their villages to jobs on the pipeline or oil field has led to increased crime, broken marriages, child neglect, and a decline in the native skills of hunting and trapping. However, fishing has so far been little affected.

Government employees, teachers and people on fixed incomes have all lost out as prices rocket. Many have taken second jobs to boost earnings. Marlo Schnurstein, 38, a teacher, makes extra money by driving buses after school.

Although his teaching post carries an annual salary of $17,000 and his wife works too, he says they could not manage without his extra income.

Others have been lured away from their jobs completely. Dean Warner, 34, news editor of the Fairbanks Daily News-Miner, will leave shortly to join the Alyeska Pipeline Service Company as a publicity officer. "I'll be paid 40 per cent more than I'm getting now," he said. "Need I say More?"

Alaska has never seen such a boom, not even in the 1890's gold rush. Yet, ironically, unemployment is running at 12 per cent and rising.

Job hunters arrive daily, seeking work on the pipeline or oilfield, but many are unlucky as the unions keep a tight control over recruitment and reserve vacancies for their own members.

The authorities have placed notices in newspapers throughout the "lower 48" -- local jargon for 48 contiguous states -- warning people not to come unless they have a job.

But still they come. Up to 20,000 are now estimated to be in Anchorage and Fairbanks waiting for jobs, many of them sleeping in cars, campers or converted schoolbuses.

Fairbanks, set between the mountains of the Alaska and Brooks ranges, is experiencing all the pangs of over-rapid growth. The population has leapt from 35,000 three years ago to 50,000. Increased traffic has brought air pollution and the telephone system is woefully overloaded.

Firemen Answer Calls

Volunteer firemen were called to the Texaco station at Fourth and Fannin to wash off gasoline from a leaking pump Thursday morning. Then at 4 p.m. Thursday the firemen extinguished a grass fire on the railroad right-of-way between Milano and Hoyte.

FAMILY
LAWYER

Icy Step

Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night ever kept George from delivering the mail at the Jenkins house. But an icy step finally did him in. He skidded, went sprawling, and dislocated his shoulder.

In due course, George filed a damage suit against Jenkins.

"They have a special problem at their house," he pointed out in court. "The roof spills rainwater across the front steps, and in cold weather this creates an unusually slick coating of ice. I didn't know about the situation until after I fell."

This "special problem," which Jenkins did not deny, was held enough basis to establish legal liability. The court said a home owner must take precautions against hazards that a visitor is not likely to notice by himself.

What kind of precautions? Perhaps sprinkling salt or spreading ashes on the ice.

Or perhaps providing adequate lighting. Thus, another home owner was held liable for neglecting to turn on his porch light, after having ordered a taxicab to come to the house at 8 p.m.

True, the cab driver realized that the steps might be icy from an afternoon storm. Still, handicapped by the darkness, he slipped anyway. And a court later granted his claim for damages. The court said that while the home owner could not be blamed for the ice, he could indeed be blamed for showing so little regard for the cabbie's safety.

But both of these cases involved some degree of fault on the part of the home owner. If he is fault-free, he is generally free from liability as well.

The claimant in another case was a newsboy who slipped while delivering the evening paper. But the visibility was all right and the step he slipped on, though icy, was no worse than the other steps on the block.

Result: no liability. The court said a home owner owed "only that care which an ordinarily prudent person in like circumstances would exercise"—but no more.

Nature Before Mammal Before...

Superlatives tinged with caution follow the Thursday splashdown of the Apollo orbital craft bearing Stafford, Brand, and Slayton.

The next space trip will be in a more conventional appearing craft called a Space Shuttle, which is re-useable and directional like an airplane.

But that is another four years away.

The Apollo-Soyuz mission was all but flawless. And its implications for furthering detente and continuing space cooperations are obvious.

Soviet and American science is coalescing for the inevitable co-operation of space travel and life after 2000 on earth.

The only war between the two is the "ultimate war" and the alternatives are those of attrition which are putting western technology, including Russia and an emerging China, in the hands of energy nations.

That is, until an energy breakthrough again places Western man beyond the needs of pre-historic energy and puts him in contact with solar, nuclear, and extra-terrestrial means like wind, which once he used as an agrarian and sailor.

The nomads of the Middle East are in control of trans-istional energy years, by the same accident of its presence that is found in Texas. But it is not the only source, only now the more convenient.

Science does intricate things in space for us to see. It will do intricate things in energy which will allow us to travel, not only on land or sub-orbiting above it, but almost any place we want to go.

International scientific co-operation is less political because we can see new approaches to survival for generations ahead. And not far ahead.

Earth co-operation is easily more apolitical because it too implies survival for now and tomorrow. It is still true: nature before mammal before man before tribe before nation before political party before holocaust.

Apollo-Soyuz is a start.

Brandt Carving New Political Role

BONN
Reuter - With a resilience that has silenced all those who wrote him off last year, former Chancellor Willy Brandt is busy carving out a new political role for himself.

Using the popularity and contacts he built up as chancellor, Brandt has now emerged as Bonn's special emissary in foreign affairs.

According to one of his advisers, his aim is to work behind the scenes for progress in east-west relations and other areas of world politics -- a task he thinks he can tackle better without the restraints of government office.

Brandt, 62, set the seal on his political recovery early this month by travelling to Moscow to meet his erstwhile opposite number in the Ostpolitik, Communist Party leader Leonid Brezhnev.

The Kremlin chief ensured maximum publicity for his guest by laying on the kind of welcome Moscow reserves for the world's most influential few. It was enough to put Brandt right back in the headlines again, almost as if there were no such thing as the current treason trial of his former aide, Guenter Guillaume.

It seemed to matter little that Brandt returned from Moscow with no more than an assurance that progress was likely soon on a number of agreements at present blocked by differences over the Berlin question.

For most West Germans it was impressive enough that he could still command Moscow's attention and respect without any ostensible government authority behind him.

But the proceedings against Guillaume, whose arrest as an alleged East German agent last year led to Brandt's resignation, were not the only thing to be overshadowed by the former chancellor's trip to Moscow.

His meetings with Brezhnev also upstaged a tour of four countries in west and central Africa by Bonn's foreign minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who could do no more than watch Brandt's Kremlin performance from the wings.

Brandt was keeping the foreign ministry informed on his Moscow talks, but the situation never seemed entirely happy -- particularly as the Soviet press had attacked Genscher only a few weeks earlier over a visit he made to West Berlin.

Soon West German commentators were comparing Genscher's travels in recent months with those of Brandt, who has conferred with presidents, premiers, and party leaders in Washington, Belgrade, Athens, Mexico City, Lisbon, and Caracas.

The influential Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung grouped the two politicians in a cartoon with Brandt's successor as chancellor, Helmut Schmidt, and a caption reading: "Lucky the country that can afford three foreign ministers at the same."

Besides the fun-poking, there were rumblings of discontent from Genscher's Free Democrat camp, said to be unhappy enough already about the way things are going in coalition with the far bigger Social Democratic Party of which Brandt is chairman and Schmidt a vice-chairman.

Policy towards the European Common Market, where Schmidt is intent on keeping a tight hold on Bonn's purse, is said to have been one of the main causes of coalition tension. Brandt's involvement in foreign affairs is widely believed to have made matters worse.

For although Brandt no longer belongs to the cabinet, old habits apparently die hard abroad.

In Moscow, Brandt discreetly asked the Russians to remove a flag bearing the federal eagle, badge of a cabinet member, from his official limousine. In Mexico and Venezuela he repeatedly had to remind his hosts that he was no longer "the government."

In Athens, he was feted by Prime Minister Constantine Karamanlis and reportedly offered an Athens constitu-ecy by Greek socialists -- if every Greece joined the Common Market and direct elections were held for the European parliament.

But while his popularity abroad is clear to all, Brandt's exact status when he confers abroad is hazy.

One possibility is that Schmidt, who has taken far less interest in the Ostpolitik, considers it best for the present to allow his predecessor to maintain contacts with Moscow -- a job the more conservative Genscher would not find as easy.

Another line of speculation here is that West Germany finds it convenient to have someone of Brandt's standing to fly the occasional kite -- as he did last year in Paris by suggesting that the richer Common Market countries integrate their economies more rapidly than the poorer ones.

Better Mahatma Cannot See...

Mahatma Gandhi's spirit, wherever is is, is impaled on the spikes of Indian totalitarianism.

The almost sainted memory of Indian independence and democracy is under the boot of military restraint at the beck of none other than Indira Gandhi.

India has cherished a role as the only Indo-Asian democracy following World War II, granted by the withdrawal of the British in 1947 after massive riots between Moslem and Hindus. Pakistan was created out of Northern India Moslem states, and India became free under the noble Gandhi's tireless leadership. He died some years later.

In fact, India became a frequent critic of the United States in the 1960s, though American agriculture aid and technocracy poured billions into India's massive sub-continent and half-billion population.

And now order must rise from inability to deal with problems beyond the Indian disorder of things. The idealism has given way to the harsh realities of joblessness, ignorance, rejection of Western solutions and continuing starvation.

It is a numbers game wracked with distemper, poor leadership and aspiration only another Gandhi could manage.

To be realistic, it is better that Gandhi cannot see what his dreams have come to.

A GREAT white shark matched the fury of fictional sharks in a sudden attack off Canada's Cape Breton island. Seas swamped the splintered dory of two lobstermen; one of them drowned, and the other clung to the wreckage until rescued. Apparently scolding them, the animal swam away. The painting re-creates the harrowing experience of John MacLeod, who survived, and John Burns, who died, on a summer morning in 1953. A tooth embedded in the battered boat identified the species. The shark's length was estimated at 12 feet; its weight at 1,000 pounds.

1975 Veterans Can Join Aerospace Teams

Cameron men and women with previous military service are now being afforded the opportunity to "cash in" on their experience, according to Sgt. Russ Wiggins, local Air Force representative for the Cameron area.

"Today's modern Aerospace Team realizes," said Sgt. Wiggins, "that there are many people now in civilian life who have had misgivings about leaving the service." "Now, a number of openings for prior service people have been allocated, and, for those with proper qualifications, a second opportunity is being offered."

"Those interested will be evaluated and, if selected, will know in advance the job they will be doing and at what Air Force base they will serve."

"Men and women who have served in any branch of the Armed Forces and who feel that being a part of the most exciting organization in the world is what they want, should contact me, Sgt. Russ Wiggins at 772-3651 in Waco."

White Shark Reigns As Lord Of The Sea

The facts about great white sharks are as awesome as the fiction.

The great white shark, star of the current movie, "Jaws," is the real lord of the sea, the National Geographic Society says.

Large or small, fast or slow, peaceful or aggressive, every other shark--and all marine creatures as well--gives sea room to the great white shark, or man-eater.

The average length of an adult great white is 18 feet; one taken off Cuba measured 21 feet. Some grow even larger. The tooth of a man-eater dredged up from the Atlantic Ocean floor measured more than five inches long. The tooth of a 20-foot-long is two inches.

Species Is Rare

Fortunately, great white sharks seem to be rare. Few people have seen more than two together, though by itself one is deadly enough. They have earned their reputation as man-eaters.

In 1916 a shark or sharks attacked five swimmers along the New Jersey coast. Four died and the fifth lost a leg. Shortly afterward a fisherman caught a great white shark with human remains in its stomach.

As the years passed, fishermen from Maine to Nova Scotia reported great whites charging their boats. In the splintered wood around an eight-inch hole in one dory was part of the unmistakable serrated, triangular tooth of a great white.

Great white shark attacks on humans also have been documented along the Calif. ornia coast, but experts minimize the danger from this and other species of sharks. Writing in National Geographic, Nathaniel T. Kenney estimated that in a normal year sharks kill or maim not less than 40 or more than 300 people around the world. Bee stings kill more people than that in the United States alone every year.

"Thus you can go into the seas... with far less risk than you run every time you take a trip in an automobile," Mr. Kenney writes. "You must not, of course, provoke a shark into attacking--not even the small, slow species frequently encountered in coastal waters. If you step on one of these or tweak its tail, it can--and often will--bite hard."

Sharks Are Unpredictable
Most of the time when a shark meets a human, the fearsome carnivore will cruise on past. But don't count on it.

"Any moment the time may come when one of the enigmatic creatures will attack a man," Mr. Kenney says. "Results can be gruesome. Razor-edged teeth may remove an arm or leg or cleanly take out a 10-pound piece of flesh. Hide rough as a rasp can flay, edges of fins and tails cut like swords. A shark is all lethal weapon."

Of the some 250 species of shark, only a handful are proved man-eaters. Besides the great white, they are mako, bull, lemon, tiger, dusky, blue, the largest hammerheads, and the whitetip, which lives on the open seas away from land.

More than most sharks, the great whites prefer a mammalian diet--whales, seals, sea otters, and so on.

"The inference is obvious," one expert told Mr. Kenney. "Man is a mammal too."

A simple lesson in cooling for less.

At Texas Power & Light, we feel that every present and future homeowner should know how to get the most efficiency from his electric cooling equipment. Efficient cooling saves energy and money on operating costs. So, we've put together this "lesson" on cooling efficiency.

How to determine an air conditioner's efficiency.
Every air conditioner has an "energy efficiency ratio" (EER). This tells you how efficiently the unit operates. The higher the EER, the more efficient the unit.

To find a unit's EER, simply divide the BTU's by the wattage of the unit. For example, if you have a central air conditioning system that produces 36,000 BTU's of cooling and uses 6,000 watts, the EER is 6.

Most air conditioning units have an EER ranging from 6 to 10.

High-efficiency units are considered to have EER's of 8 or above.

The initial cost of high-efficiency units is usually more than that of units with low efficiency, but they cost less to operate.

You know your EER. Now what?

Keep equipment in proper working order. A qualified serviceman should check it at least once a year. Check the filter about once a month and clean or replace if dirty.

You can help your cooling equipment operate efficiently if you keep the outside part of window units and the compressor of central systems free of obstructions. Close draperies or blinds to block out the sun's heat.

Other ways to increase efficiency are to clean the cool air outlets and returns and keep furniture and draperies away from them; keep fireplace dampers closed; weatherstrip around doors and windows; caulk cracks to prevent drafts and cool air loss.

For more information on efficient air conditioning, contact your air conditioning contractor or the Customer Service Representative at your local TP&L office. They will be happy to help you.

Regents To Approve Budget

WACO

The board of regents for Texas State Technical Institute is expected to approve a $19,518,948 budget for the next fiscal year at the July 28 meeting in Amarillo.

The proposed budget is an increase of about $2.6 million over the 1974-75 budget of $16,920,582.

Board chairman J. H. Kultgen of Waco will call the meeting to order at 9 a.m. on the Mid-Continent campus.

Plans to build three structures to house diesel and construction equipment mechanics on the James Connally Campus in Waco will be taken to the board.

The Legislature recently appropriated $748,000 to replace a classroom and laboratory building which burned to the ground on October 30, 1974, on the Waco campus.

WARSAW

Poland has officially recognized that private enterprise has a useful role to play in its communist society and is taking steps to encourage it. In a significant change of policy, the government is removing some of the obstacles placed in the way of private tradesmen and restaurant owners.

ROME

An Italian sexologist has horrified Roman Catholics here with a suggestion that the country's prostitutes could be about to invade St. Peter's Basilica. The idea, which comes from Professor Giovanni Caletti, follows the protest campaign waged by French prostitutes recently has once again focussed attention to the plight of an estimated one million Italian "Bell di Notte."

LONDON

British national newspapers are turning to advanced computer technology to trim payrolls and overcome the economic crisis that is threatening the industry's very survival. Two of the leading newspapers, the Financial Times and the mass-circulation Daily Mirror, have announced plans for evolutionising production by using computers.

YUGOSLAVIA

Each summer for the past 26 years special permission has been granted by the Vatican for the performances of the Dubrovnik summer festival to be held in the churches, monasteries and chapels of this walled Adriatic medieval town. But holy places are only some of the spots in the town where performances are given during the festival.

JOHANNESBURG

When workers speaking 58 different dialects and tongues are thrust together there is only one thing to do--invent a language they can all understand. So when blacks and white first arrive at South Africa's mines, they must all be taught to communicate in Frankalo, meaning simply "speak like this." The language is simplified form of Zulu, Xhosa, and related languages.

DAYTON, TENN.

Fifty years ago this month, this small Tennessee town gained world-wide attention as the scene of the famous "monkey-trial," to test the state's law making it illegal to teach in schools Charles Darwin's theory of evolution. Practically everyone who took part in the courtroom drama that made judicial history are dead, but for the few who remain, time has not dimmed their memories.

Believe In Yourself

To a great degree you are what you think you are and you can do what you think you can do. Your attitude toward yourself gives you a lift or pushes you into despair.

Your self-image... this is what gives you joy or heartbreak, success or failure, happiness or pain. Your self-image can help you to do what you must to enjoy your work, and it can help you to enjoy your play. It can give you confidence in your work and in the activities which you choose for your leisure time.

Resolve to be joyful; to be charitable in your self-appraisals, to see yourself in your best moments, to strengthen this pleasant vision of yourself—based on reality, not myth, but on a positive picture of reality.

While a person who has had wholesome help in his formative years will find the maintenance of a healthy self-image possible with no effort at all, still, with effort and understanding, anyone can strengthen this mental picture of himself to the extent that life is tolerable, even rewarding.

Then, with repeated effort, with compassion for his limitations, with endless striving to bring forth the image of himself that is uplifting—and everyone has some good moments—he can continue to consolidate his gains in self-esteem.

Three ideas which will never let you down:

1. Believe in yourself.
2. Set goals every day you live.
3. Never withdraw from life.

County Agent Gives Program

The Cameron Home Demonstration Club met in the home of Irene Angell July 15 with the county extension agent giving a program on "Energy Conservation in a Home."

Nine members were present at the meeting in which all council reports and committees were passed. A vote to sponsor a bake booth at the 4-H Bicentennial Fun Day to be held August 2 at the mall was passed. The meeting was adjourned with Faye Angell winning the surprise package.

The next meeting will be a covered dish dinner and is scheduled for August 16.

Family Holds Reunion

Descendants of John and Katherine Hromcik gathered for their second reunion on Saturday, July 20 in Cameron. Thirteen families, totaling 49 members, attended.

A Mass at St. Monica's began the day and was followed by a covered dish lunch at the KC Hall.

Officers elected during the meeting held after lunch were: Louis Absnider Jr. of Austin, president; Mrs. Jerry Wade of Austin, secretary-treasurer; and Mrs. Henry I. Lee of Temple, historian.

Others attending came from Austin, Burlington, Cameron, Ft. Worth, Rockdale, Temple, and Norfolk, Nb.

The next reunion will be held in July 1977, in Cameron.

College Notes

Cameron area students have been named to the "Distinguished Student" list at Texas A&M University.

They include Velma J. Greer, daughter of Jerry Greer of Milano. She is majoring in education curriculum and instruction. Also named is Thomas Dokupil of Rt. 1, Burlington who is majoring in engineering technology.

Others include Darrell L. Schneider, pre-pharmacy, son of Fritz W. Schneider of Rt. 1, Burlington; Paul Dean Vaculin, agronomy, son of Emil F. Vaculin, Rt. 1, Cameron; and Diane Marie Webster, education curriculum and instruction, daughter of Jeff D. Webster of Cameron.

Divider Shields Arrival's Blush

Does your front door open right into the living room, to the embarrassment of late and early arrivals?

A divider can create the needed degree of privacy, depending on the space that can be spared for the inside entry and the shape and material decided on.

A solid wall, straight or L-shaped, will shield the doorway, but likely is too severe for the room. An open divider serves as a separation but not a blockage.

The home handyman can choose from a variety of ideas, such as these: A solid wall of wainscot height, topped by vertical wood spindles; low cabinets opening inward, with a wood grille above; a wall of open shelves holding bric-a-brac, books and plants.

FRUIT SALADS PLEASE EYE AND PALATE

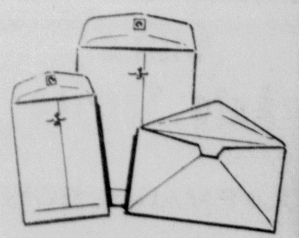

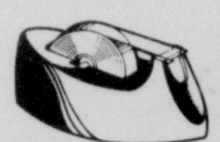

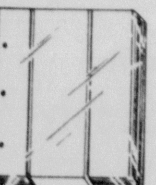

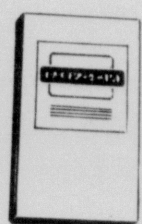

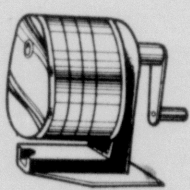

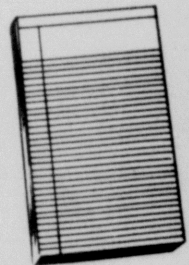

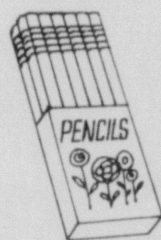

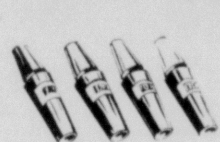

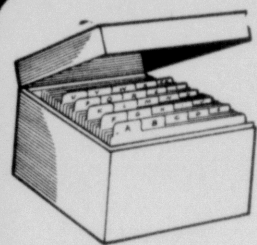

The refreshing flavor of fresh fruits and berries is one of the special joys of summer. This is the time of year to enjoy the luxury of colorful fruit salad plates on beds of crisp lettuce. Arrange generous cuts of juicy melons, peaches, pears, apricots, purple plums, strawberries—any combination of fruits in season—in colorful compositions to delight the eye and tempt the palate. Besides being delicious and lovely, fruit salad plates that include melon, banana, strawberries and citrus fruits are also important sources of essential vitamin C. Nuts, halved or chopped, are always a good addition to fruit salads.

And over such salads, serve flavorful dressings especially created to complement the fruit flavors. The two fruit salad dressings given here were developed in the Hellmann's/Best Foods kitchens.

Banana Salad Dressing: Mash 1 banana (about 1/2 cup). Stir in 1 tablespoon orange juice and 1/2 cup Real Mayonnaise. Add 1/4 teaspoon minced onion, if desired. Makes about 1 cup dressing.

Lime Cottage Cheese Dressing: Mix 1/2 cup Real Mayonnaise, 1/2 cup small curd creamed cottage cheese. Stir in 2 tablespoons milk, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1/2 teaspoon grated lime rind and 1 tablespoon lime juice. Makes 1 cup dressing.

Louvered Fence Lets Air Move

A fence with baffles or louvers is useful as well as decorative, controlling the flow of air in a yard or garden and insuring privacy.

Top and bottom rails of 2x4-inch western wood set on 4x4 posts hold the vertical baffles of 1x4 boards at a 45-degree angle. The boards can be set in saw kerfs or spaced with pieces of board cut at angles and nailed to the rails.

Horizontal louver boards can be nailed to notched vertical 2x4s. The angle of the notches can be varied according to air flow and privacy desired. (See Sketch Below)

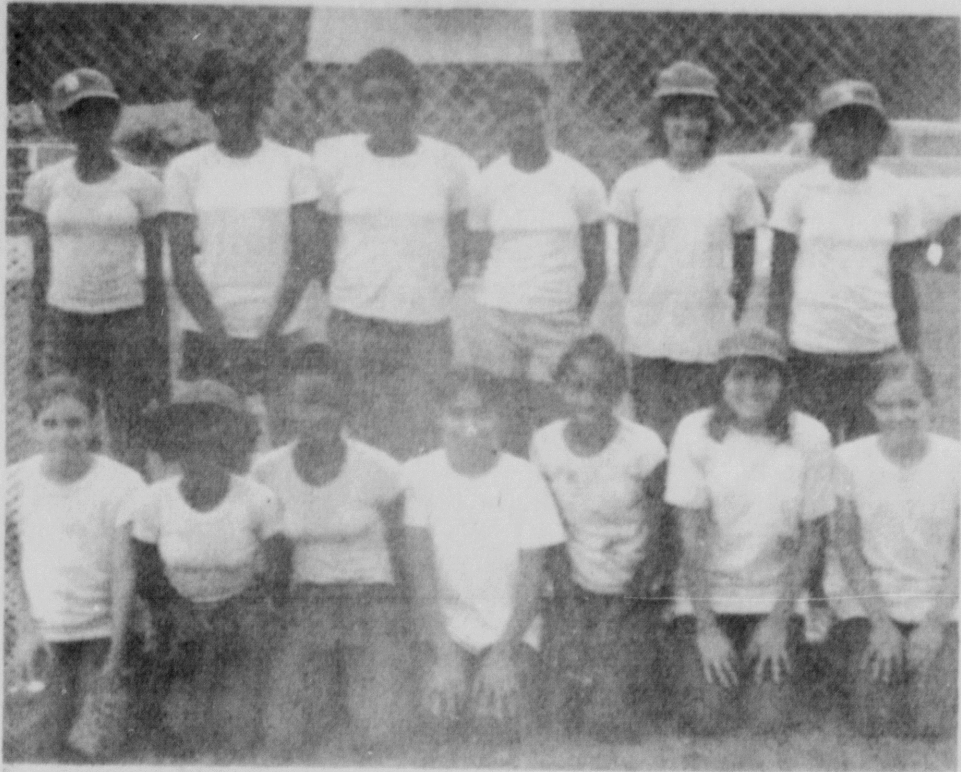

Baffle fence of western wood boards set at angle on bottom, top rails of 2x4s gives yard privacy, free air circulation.

Wood Found Able To Aid Oil Users

Wood, a renewable resource, can supply most of the raw material for the U.S. petrochemical industry, if oil runs short, states a study conducted at North Carolina State university.

About 50 million tons of wood could replace petroleum now being converted to chemicals, and this can be timber too low-grade for lumber and plywood, the NCSU study asserted.

Wood contains the ingredients to make plastics and synthetic rubber, even motor fuel, and it's renewable in the forest. Soaring crude oil prices could trigger a changeover trend, it was noted.

TIPS FOR OUTDOORSMEN

That popular image of modern man's softness is a false one. If you're not an outdoorsman you'll probably be surprised to learn that today's campers are sturdy souls and fully able to cope with most any situation that arises.

True, outdoor equipment and the inventiveness of outdoorsmen have combined to better the sportsman's living conditions.

But, most of the advantage is in "know-how" and modern-day outdoorsmen know more about the wilderness than Daniel Boone ever imagined possible. Today's explorers know well the basics of camping, tent pitching and outdoor cooking. They have learned from first-hand experience.

Shortage of gasoline has caused many outdoorsmen to wonder if their activities are about to end. We don't think so. Today it's part and parcel of healthy living.

Frankly, if everyone who drives a motor vehicle does so economically, we should have no serious gasoline worries.

White-Wing Doves Return To Valley

EDINBURG

Adult white-winged doves have returned to the Texas Rio Grande Valley this year in near-record numbers.

Not since 1966 have there been more whitewings in Texas.

Population counts by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologists have tallied some 675,000 birds—a 28 percent increase over the 1174 total of 529,000 adult birds.

According to P&W white-winged dove project leader Garu Waggener of Edinburg, 78 percent of the Valley's doves currently are to be found in Hidalgo County.

"The outlook for the September white-winged dove season is good," said Waggener. "Food supplies are excellent and prospects of favorable weather should increase production of young birds this summer."

high winds in the lower Valley during the past two to three weeks have temporarily set back white-winged dove nesting.

"Past experience," said Waggener, "Show that the whitewings usually respond by re-nesting to make up for their destroyed nests."

An increased portion of Rio Grande Valley farmland has been planned in grain sorghum which should be to the whitewing's benefit.

Most of the grain is harvested by mid-summer. Farmers in the Valley could increase the number of doves available in the fall by leaving grain sorghum stubble in their fields.

White-winged dove hunting season for this year will be set by Texas Parks & Wildlife Commissioners during public hearings in late July.

RIO GRANDE VALLEY WHITEWING - White-winged doves returned to the Rio Grande Valley in near-record numbers this year. Not since 1966 have there been more adult whitewings in the Valley. Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologists put the total count at some 675,000 adult birds, a 28 percent increase over last year's tally of 529,000.

Texas Beavers Rival Dam Engineers

The U. S. Army Corps of Engineers in Central Texas has asked Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologists how they can deal with a rival group of engineers--beavers.

Beavers are rapidly expanding their range in Texas and especially favor the numerous man-made lakes and stock tanks where they stop up drains with sticks and mud.

Corps engineers want the impoundments to drain slowly after each rain and reduce the danger of floods.

But the larger rodents prefer higher and more constant water levels to get them closer to trees which are their food supply.

Biologists at the P&W say that young beavers once they are weaned are evicted from established colonies by the adults and forced to set up colonies of their own.

The animals are gradually reoccupying their former range from which they were trapped by man in the 19th century.

Department biologists say that the beaver is not an endangered animal and that populations exist even within the city limits of Austin.

New Hunting Guides To Be Available

AUSTIN

Information on game and fish laws for upcoming seasons is contained in the new "Guide to Texas Hunting Sport Fishing Regulations, 1975-76" soon to be available where hunting and fishing licenses are sold.

This year's 24-page booklet from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department features county-by-county listings of seasons and bag limits for popular game species along with fishing regulations.

Also included is a county locator map to pinpoint any one of the state's 254 counties specific notes on special game animals and birds which may be hunted in the counties under the Parks and Wildlife Department's regulatory authority.

More detailed information is listed for licenses, tags and permits, minnows, fur-bearing animals, and general freshwater sport fishing and hunting rules.

Regulation for migratory game birds and commercial and saltwater fishing have yet to be established by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission and are not included in the Guide.

P&W officials say the guide will be mailed to all license sales deputies July 25 and should be available to the public by the first of August.

Rockdale's Randy Gilleland sank a four-and-a-half foot putt on the 18th hole to nip Robert Walker of Harker Heights by one-stroke and win the First Flight title in the Fifth Annual People's National Bank Junior golf tournament held in Belton.

Gilleland captured the 36-hole 17-18 year-old category with an even par 144 while Walker carded a 145. Michael Jones of Killeen fired a 147 to nab third place.
